Students mix school and work

By Anna Brown

For many college students, working is a way to fund a portion of their education. It is a way to gain valuable work experience and to learn about the world of work. Working while studying can be a challenging experience, but it can also be a rewarding one. It can help students to develop time management skills and to learn how to balance their work and their studies. 1. Go to class. This is the most important tip. If you don't go to class, you won't learn anything. Make sure you are always on time and that you are listening to the lecturer.
2. Stay organized. Keep your notes and books in order. Use a calendar to keep track of your assignments and deadlines.
3. Ask for help. Don't be afraid to ask your lecturer or tutor for help if you are struggling with a subject.
4. Study hard. Don't procrastinate. Start studying early and make sure you understand the material.
5. Take breaks. It's important to take breaks to rest your mind and avoid burnout.
6. Use the library. The library is a great resource for books and research materials.
7. Join a study group. Studying with others can be helpful and fun.
8. Get a good night's sleep. Sleep is essential for your health and your ability to learn.
9. Stay healthy. Eat well and exercise regularly to keep your body and mind in good shape.

 VOTE THIS THURSDAY *****

FROM THE DEAN'S DESK:

To both old and new students I wish to give an "official" welcome as we enter the second year of our being in our new home. Throughout the year both Faculty and myself will be working with you to make this a red-letter-year in the history of the College.

Last year's class set a fine example for us with excellent leadership from the President of the student body. The election of a president of the student body should be given your careful attention, for his or her leadership must coincide with the best interest of the college.

To the staff of the College Newspaper I wish continued success in their publication.

Sincerely,

Robert D. Meyen, Dean

If I am elected president of Boone Junior College, I will do the very best job of which I am capable. My biggest plan is to form a "social" committee. This committee will plan picnics, parties, and of course, the Junior College banquet.

Lee will retire

By April Schumann
Staff Writer

At the end of this academic year Tom Lee, DMACC Boone Campus Provost, will be retiring after more than a decade with the school.

"It was a hard decision because I really love what I do," said Lee. "I truly would like to thank the faculty, staff and especially the students for the past 11 years."

Lee began his career at DMACC in August of 2005 after already having worked in education for more than 30 years, including the time he served as principal of East High School in Des Moines.

Lee was a part of the large growth of the Boone Campus. Some of the key changes seen during Lee's tenure were:

- A 235 percent increase in enrollment
- Addition of the Civil Engineering Technology wing along with a new quiet area for students to study
- Renovation and additions to student housing including the addition of Honors Program Apartments
- Construction of on-campus baseball and softball fields
- Addition of men's and women's golf programs, softball and women's cross country
- Purchase of seven acres of land near campus to allow for future growth

When Lee left East High in 2005 to come to DMACC he welcomed the change, as he no longer had to deal with the same issues he had as principal new position as Provost that when the job started it was "Probably better than I had expected... it was a nice change."

As he starts the next leg on the journey of life Lee says he and his wife will be glad to not have to "live by the calendar and clock" and can just take it slow, enjoying the time. He commented that he would like filling the time with woodworking, golfing and fishing. He and his wife will now be able to travel and discover the world as well as themselves, figuring out where and what they really want to be.

No matter what the future brings they are "really

The New Face of Technology: How Virtual Reality, Social Media Affect Students and World

By Sarah Wilkins

As technology continues to advance, it is reshaping the way we live, work, and learn. Virtual Reality (VR) and social media are two of the most prominent examples of this technological revolution. VR offers immersive experiences that can be used in education, entertainment, and healthcare. Social media, on the other hand, has revolutionized communication and information sharing. While these technologies offer numerous benefits, they also present challenges, such as privacy concerns and the spread of misinformation. It is essential for students to understand the implications of these technologies and use them responsibly.
